

Idea Description

The idea behind Rising Waters is to build an intelligent flood prediction platform that helps government authorities and disaster management teams estimate flood risk before disasters occur.

Instead of relying only on historical observations, the system uses Machine Learning to analyze environmental parameters and provide real-time flood probability predictions.

The application is developed using Flask and can be deployed on cloud platforms for public accessibility.